

SSL Sessions

Jack speaks to Lily Powell about her recent endeavour The SSL Sessions is a series of recorded live performances offering artists the chance to perform and receive studio-quality accompanying visual media.

The SSL Sessions are an amazing entirely student-led project spearheaded by Lily Powell and videographer Erik Davis; inviting students to Guilford's SSL studio where they shoot live lounge-style sessions of original and cover performances. The artists perform music of their choosing, generating a high-quality and authentic recording. Split into Volumes, the SSL Sessions have already featured performances from Freja Lucy, Toby Proctor and Huw Lloyd. A multimedia showcase of talent and musicality, SSL Sessions allows artists to honestly represent themselves and their craft while presenting with a studio-quality recording.

Constantly in conversation with the lead engineers at Metropolis, the SSL Sessions team are constantly learning and improving their craft and maintaining a presence at a professional level as curators and content creators.

With aspirations to one day host a 'Live at Metropolis Studios,' and working on expanding into various genres with a rap and DJ showcase in the works already. Forming bonds at every session with the artists and all involved, the set seems the perfect place for a bit of lighthearted networking while having fun recording and making music.

Any artists eager to get involved with the SSL Sessions project can contact @SSLSessions on Instagram or via email at sslsessionscontact@gmail.com
Make sure to check out SSL Sessions on Instagram and YouTube.

Let us know your thoughts: thebuzz@acm.ac.uk